Warm up for the task ahead

Stage-Ready Choir

Practical performance preparation / Use with your real event and rehearsal space

Choose a familiar preparation that fits the event, the time available, and how the singers feel that day.

Before you begin

Choose a familiar preparation that fits the event, the time available, and how the singers feel that day. More warm-up is not automatically better, especially before a demanding programme.

Prepare in a sensible order

Settle body and attention, use an ordinary breath-and-speech task, introduce a gentle middle-range sound, then rehearse one feature that appears in the programme. Include recovery between repetitions.

Keep effort comfortable

Offer a different octave, a smaller pattern, or listening instead of singing when appropriate. Avoid breath-holding contests and extreme range exploration. Stop a task that produces pain, dizziness, or vocal strain.

Finish with a relevant transfer

Test one opening and one ending rather than running every song. Allow quiet recovery before going on. A singer who is hoarse or unwell should not be pushed to sing through it.

YOUR EVENT CHECK

- ☐ The routine suits today's repertoire
- ☐ Comfortable alternatives are available
- ☐ Recovery time is built into the routine
- ☐ The choir is prepared rather than fatigued
